

Whereas: A CUNY teach-in organized by the university's faculty and staff union, the Professional Staff Congress aimed at creating "a safe harbor for people and ideas" in the wake of the terrorist attacks of September 11th.

And Whereas: Free speech is both the cornerstone of democracy and the guarantee of free speech is central to the integrity of institutions of higher education.

And Whereas: Both the Trustees of the City University of New York and Matthew Goldstein, the university's chancellor appear to favor the curtailment of academic free speech in their separate condemnations of professors who criticized U.S. foreign policy in the context of that teach-in.

Therefore Be it Resolved: That the SUNY Old Westbury Faculty Senate, supporting the free and open exchange of ideas in the academic context, deplores both actions.

To be sent to Chancellor Goldstein and the CUNY Board of Trustees
